"3. Will the bonds be put out to the lowest bidder?

"4. Does the $1,290,000 appropriation cover the proposed football field and other outdoor athletic facilities?

"5. Will the school be constructed so that an addition could be added at a later date if necessary?

"6. If the appropriation is approved, when will the construction actually commence and when should the school be ready for use?"

Indians Still Produce Shiny New Arrowheads

Like the auto makers in Detroit the American Indians are still turning out new models.

If you have a yen to examine the latest thing in arrowheads—all in shiny glass—a journey to the Haffenreffer Museum of the American Indian in Bristol should satisfy your curiosity.

Less there be any misunderstanding, however, Dr. Louis Giddings Jr., museum director, explained these make up only a small percentage of the collection and were included to make it as complete as possible. These with others will soon be labeled, he said.

Most of the latest arrowheads are being made in the southwestern part of the United States, the doctor said.

Earlier models in the museum date back 5-6,000 years, Dr. Giddings added.

On its first weekend opening more than 140 persons visited the museum, he reported.

The museum is open to the public Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays from 1 to 4 p.m.

The entire collection which Dr. Giddings called the work of a "very astute" collector is being catalogued and will soon be put in new show cases, he said.

Plans are to have the artifacts arranged so as to tell a story. The collection includes items representing large segments of almost all the American Indians and some tribes from Central and South America. The collection of Indian costumes is particularly fine, he said.

Particularly interesting to him, Dr. Giddings said, are several Eskimo "ivory" carvings which were done around 1890 in what is now an extinct style.

Warren Gang Violence Results in 8 Arrests

Eight youths who were involved in an outbreak of gang violence in Warren early yesterday morning were taken into custody after four of them had wrecked an automobile belonging to a Warren youth, whom one of the gang had intended to beat up.

Four juveniles who admitted smashing the intended victim's car were released by police to their parents after they had agreed to pay repair costs on the automobile.

Three older youths, who admitted being in the vicinity at the time and "making a lot of noise" pleaded guilty to reveling charges and were fined $10 and cost each. The case of a Riverside youth, who also pleaded guilty to reveling was continued until next Thursday for sentence.

Earmarked for the beating had been Lewis Brimmer of 153 Child St., Warren. When the gang reached the Brimmer home shortly after midnight they decided that instead of calling the intended victim out of his house they would go to work on the automobile. A hood was smashed in, a windshield and window were broken and a windshield wiper and radio antenna torn off.

Pleading guilty on the reveling charges in Warren district court were James Miller, 18, of 70 Stowe Ave., Riverside; Frank Cabral, 23, of 32C Barton Ave., Warren; Robert W. Botelho, 19, of 676 Main St., Warren, and William Quirk, 19, of Bullock's Point Avenue, Riverside. All but Quirk were fined $10 and costs each by Judge James B. Linehan.

Quirk's case was continued to Thursday's regular court session for sentence because he is on probation for six months. He received the probationary sentence last Thursday in Warren district court on a disorderly person charge, growing out of an incident that culminated in a scuffle with a Barrington police officer.

The eight youths were arrested at about 12:30 a.m. yesterday after Patrolman Arthur Botelho gave chase to a car in which they were riding over Child, Asselin and Market Streets in Warren.

On arrival at the police headquarters, some of the gang tried, to no avail, to run away. Officer Botelho said he chased the car containing the eight youths after he heard a loud crash on Child Street. The noise was believed caused by the youths smashing the Brimmer automobile.

At 1:45 a.m. today, about 14 hours after his appearance in court, Cabral came to the Warren police station and reported that he had been beaten up at 12:30 a.m. today on Child Street, Warren, near the so-called "Polish Club." At the time his left eye was puffed and his right jaw was badly swollen and he complained of a back injury, according to the police report.

Cabral said he had been beaten up by a Warren man who subsequently was questioned by Warren police and denied that he was Cabral assailant. The police say there was no connection between the brawl this morning and the incident early yesterday morning.
